

These genes are inside your body's cells. They are your body's very own set of directions. They tell your body many things—like what color your hair will be or how tall to grow.

Identical twins have the same set of directions.